

Savvy Mommy

The Essential Guide to Parenting Little Ones

Say Cheese with Jordan Elyse

When I was pregnant with my daughter, Natalie Madeline, I hid from any and every camera. The only picture that exists is a candid shot my mother took while I was in a bakery - three days before I gave birth - in front of a ton of Kosher cookies. Thanks, Mom!

Not only am I ashamed that I don't have a 'mom to be' photo in all my glory but I am embarrassed that I let feelings of insecurity cause me to miss out on an opportunity that for me will only happen probably one more time in my life if I am lucky.

Thankfully, there's a top New York child photographer who understands that pregnant moms like me can be a little nutty about their new bodies. Jordan Elyse photography - a photography studio currently celebrating its third year snaps beautiful shots of expectant moms (with their husbands or by themselves).

Check out the 'Moms to Be' portfolio of Jordan Elyse photography for clients obviously happy with Jordan's work.

Sugar Tush - Downward Facing Baby

I'm already signed up for mommy and baby yoga classes once my son arrives and I've just found the gear for him to wear. Sugar Tush - a collection of chic baby yoga togs.

Created by fashion and marketing moms,
Jennifer

